After these pictures Mrs. Joseph Earle Stevens posed as a Lely portrait and Lawrence S. Butler as a Franz Hals.

There was a break after these tableaux, when the "Mirror Dance," which made quite a hit at the Junior League entertainment of last January, was executed by Mrs. Walter N. Stillman and print, No. 55, of the Countess Spencer, after Sir Joshua Reynolds's portrait.

While preparations were being made for more tableaux Miss Edith Mortimer and Gerald Murphy danced a Russian waitz, which was also a feature of the Junior League entertainment.

Then came two pictures after Gainsborough by Miss Olga Wiborg and Miss Eleanor Mortimer. Miss Leonie Burrill and Maurice Roche followed in portraits after Titian. Miss Mary Hoyt Wiborg followed in a Van Dyck pose and Mrs. Dwight Collier in a Rembrandt. Mrs. Robert Low Bacon was most effective as a Velasquez portrait. Mrs. Henry J. Whigham was seen in a Reynolds pose. Francis Roche and Miss Edith Mortimer posed after Van Dyck, and J. Flavel Hubbard after Rembrandt.

EBEN PLYMPTON, OLD STAGE FAVORITE, DEAD

Played Leading Roles in Many Famous Companies—Was 62 Years Old.

Eben Plympton, who was last seen in this city in "Twelfth Night" when George Tyler revived the play at the Liberty Theatre as a means of introducing Phyllis Neilson Terry, died yesterday of pneumonia at a hotel at Fortyfifth street and Eighth avenue. He had not appeared on the stage since November.

Mr. Plympton was born in Boston on Mr. Plympton was born in Boston on February 7, 1853, and worked as a clerk in the office of the Boston Post. He acted as an amateur during his leisure hours and acquired some experience in that way before his health broke down and he was compelled to go to the West. As there was no other work there than his acting he became a professional in Sacramento under the direction of Joseph Proctor. Here he got the invaluable training that was the result of appearing in a stock company got the invaluable training that was the result of appearing in a stock company of capable actors. So far advanced was he at the end of a year that John McCullough engaged him for the famous company at the California Theatre in San Francisco. He was then only 20. He was called the following year, however, to become leading actor of the Park Theatre in Brooklyn and was at Wallack's a season later. On November 23, 1875, he entered the Union Square Company and played in the famous "Rose Michel" with Rose Eytinge and Charles Thorne.

Company and played in the famous "Rose Michel" with Rose Eytinge and Charles Thorne.

He then went with John T. Raymond in the first production of "The Gilded Age." Adelaide Nellson the next year engaged him as her principal actor and he appeared with her in all the Shake-spearian roles. He was next the leading man in "Hazel Kirke."

He continued to occupy important positions, now supporting Edwin Booth here and abroad, acting in stock companies as leading man and ultimately acting with Mme. Modjeska, Julia Marlowe and Viola Allen, with Eleanor Robson in "Romeo and Juliet" and with George Tyler for his revival of "London Assurance." Theatregoers of the day will probably remember him best from his appearance in "The Garden of Allah" at the Century Theatre.

Whereas, Our Heavenly Father, in His Whereas, Our Henventy Father, in His infinite love and inscrutable wisdom, has most unexpectedly bereaved us, by the ministry of the angel of death, of our saintly founder and beloved Moderator, Right Rev. Mgr. Denis J. McMahon. Domestic Prelate of His Hollness Pope Benedict XV, and Supervisor of Catholic Charities in the Archdocese of New York:

Whereas, we who have been singularly privileged, favored and blessed, for so many years, through our relations with Mgr. McMahon—verily, an apostis of charity and a father of the poor, have known and experienced his kind-liness of heart, have been constant witnesses of his devotion and fidelity to every work of Christian mercy, and have been more than edified and inspired by the extremity of his personal have been more than edified and in-spired by the extremity of his personal sacrifice, the intensity of his ex-traordinary activity, humility and the largeness of his successes in many varied fields of Catholic charity: Whereas, we cannot but recognize the nobility of his service, not only to Catholic agencies of benevolence among the poor and afflicted, but also to the common cause of charity and relief in our great metropolis amongst people of every race and creed: Be it Resolved. That in the eternal pass-ing of our late Moderator, at the mo-ment of his supreme interest in our association, we have suffered an irreparable loss; that while our hearts are crushed with the weight of most profound sorrow, we how most reverently and humbly to the wise dis-Resolved further.
